What are the Reasons for the OSU Health Fee?

> The fee that all students pay supports the public health of the OSU community.

> The fee makes the health service very accessible to students.

> The OSU health fee forms the backbone of the program (60 percent of the total operation of Student Health is supported by the health fee).

> Students are notified of tuition and fees before enrolling, and all fees are included in financial aid calculations.

> There is due process (Student Health Advisory Board, Student Incidental Fee Committee and public hearings). Student fees are approved by ASOSU, the OSU President and then by the Oregon State University Board of Trustees.

> One visit to Student Health makes up for the cost of the quarterly health fee, as initial office visits in the private medical community generally cost more than the charge for the university’s health fee.

> The combined health fee covers services for both Student Health and Counseling and Psychological Services.
